take part in the programme are often professionals and yet it is not considered anything but a favor to be invited to a morning entertainment when the hostess asks some of her cultivated friends to assist. The morning entertainments allow more to be crowded into the day and the quiet of a musicale prepares society for a tea or a reception in the afternoon and a party in

A Two-Color Wedding. At a recent wedding given in one of the Eastern cities all the appointments were yellow and white instead of just white, the color usually adopted by brides. The bride's gown was a yellow silk with trimmings and draperies of white lace and she carried a huge bouquet of white chrysanthemums tied with yellow ribbon. The bridesmaids all wore yellow gowns and carried yellow chrysanthemums tied with yellow ribbon. The house decorations were of the two colors and the bride's table had a yellow cover and every dish, confection and edible was white. Every detail was wrought in the two colors and the effect was described as unique and very rich and effective. The old idea that every thing about a bride should be white is slowly passing away and the in-white is eschewed. A Novel Idea.

A card club of married people has hit upon a novel scheme for their club for this winter. So much has been said and there is so often much feeling about prizes in the card clubs that the members decided that there should be none of that in their organization. Whenever the members play, each one who loses a game is obliged to pay a forfeit of ten cents into the treasury of the club. At the end of the season or at any time which the club shall decide, the money is to be spent for the members equal-ly. They will all go to the theater, a con-cert, have a banquet or it shall pay for some article of intrinsic worth for each member. The club has been playing but a short time but they already have a sufficient amount to get them a very nice treat.

White brandied cherries, inclosed in a paper case matching the color of the decorations, glace strawberries, and glace nuts and the like are the sweets which society ordains shall be served for the dinners and the suppers of the hour, and an invitation to a welsh rarebit should not be served be-fore 10 in the evening and then only to a few of the most intimate friends who can sit around and gossip for an hour while enjoying the repast.
